

Fall 1998

Vol. 8, No. 2 (Fall 1998)

Follow this and additional works at: <http://www.repository.law.indiana.edu/alumniupdate>

Part of the Legal Education Commons, and the Legal Profession Commons

Recommended Citation

"Vol. 8, No. 2 (Fall 1998)" (1998). Alumni Update. Paper 2.
<http://www.repository.law.indiana.edu/alumniupdate/2>

This Newsletter is brought to you for free and open access by the Law School Publications at Digital Repository @ Maurer Law. It has been accepted for inclusion in Alumni Update by an authorized administrator of Digital Repository @ Maurer Law. For more information, please contact wattn@indiana.edu.

JEROME HALL LAW LIBRARY

INDIANA UNIVERSITY
Maurer School of Law
Bloomington

alumni Update

a publication of the

Fall 1998
Vol. 8, No. 2

Indiana University School of Law—Bloomington

School tackles new millennium at Alumni Weekend on Oct. 2-3

What challenges will law face in the new millennium? Faculty tackled this question at an Alumni Weekend seminar in sessions that ranged from business developments, through cyberspace and infectious diseases, to the tax code.

Professors Hannah Buxbaum, William Hicks, and Bruce Markell looked at the effect of globalization on business in areas from securities offerings and bankruptcies to cross-border financing and international-ized secured credit. Markell had recently traveled to Indonesia at that country's request to work on bankruptcy and secured transactions reform in order to help the country meet requirements imposed by the International Monetary Fund and has been involved on the International Bar Association's behalf with the United Nation's efforts to formulate an international convention on secured transactions as they relate to receivables. Buxbaum's work for Davis Polk before joining the law school largely focused on international securities, and she is teaching a seminar in international bankruptcy this spring. Hicks regularly teaches a course in international securities.

Hicks began with a presentation on the domestic impact of international securities transactions, looking at the changing character of capital markets, the increasingly diverse sources of regulation over global markets in securities, and jurisdictional issues in regulation.

Buxbaum and Markell used a problem involving the sale of a business to investigate how changes in Article 9 and the adoption of a new model international convention on cross border insolvencies might play out.

Dean Alfred Aman presents the portrait of Professor Emeritus F. Thomas Schornhorst at the Academy of Law Alumni Fellows Dinner on Oct. 2.

Jim Petersen, JD'76, the incoming president for the Law Alumni Association and the Alumni Board, addresses the alumni gathering.

Professor Fred Cate then turned to developments in "cyber law," noting that "every law firm and every client is facing issues posed by information technology. These issues are not limited to high-technology companies and large concerns with big internal networks." Cate, who has written extensively on information law issues and who directs the Law School's Information Law and Commerce Institute, discussed the impact of the growing dependence on digital information and information technologies on both the practice of law and the substantive issues faced by clients. He surveyed a broad range of information law issues, with particular attention to privacy, ownership of data, and the Year 2000 problem.

In a timely after-lunch presentation, the topic turned to disease. Professor David Fidler, who has worked with the World Health Organization and written extensively about emerging infectious diseases, discussed how the crisis in the area of these diseases affects human rights, trade, and environmental protection. He developed the concept of a "global health jurisprudence" that explicitly recognizes the interdependence of domestic and international law and argued in favor of a greater role

(continued on page 6)

School court martials George A. Custer; Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg presides

The Honorable Ruth Bader Ginsburg, Justice of the United States Supreme Court, visited the Law School on Sept. 16-18 as Jurist in Residence. During her visit, the Justice participated in a mock court martial of General George Armstrong Custer for his conduct at the Battle of the Little Bighorn in 1876, in which 263 men under his command died when he was overwhelmed by Lakota Sioux.

During the mock trial, which will appear on CSPAN, Lt. Col. Custer was found guilty of two violations of the articles of war, stripped of his command, and dismissed from the Army. Justice Ginsburg shared the bench with Indiana Supreme Court Justice Frank Sullivan Jr., JD'82, and IU Law Professor David Williams, a former clerk to Justice Ginsburg when she served on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

The charges against Custer were argued by Kathleen Buck, JD'73, a partner in the Washington, D.C., office of Kirkland & Ellis and former general counsel for the Department of Defense, and law student Damon Leichty. Robert Long, JD'71, a partner at Latham & Watkins, and law student Azin Lotfi defended Custer. All members of the bench and attorneys appeared in military uniform. John Walda, BA'72, JD'75, partner of Barrett & McNagny and president of the Indiana University Board of Trustees, presented the historical context of the arguments before a rapt Moot Court audience.

(continued on page 2)

United States Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg

Page 2

See Custer mock trial photos

Page 4

Meet the new Academy of Law Fellows

Page 6

Find out what went on:
Alumni Weekend '98 photos

Page 8

Get the scoop on faculty

Page 10

Read notes from your classmates

Page 12

Send us your class note

i n s i d e

Custer trial

(continued from page 1)

The historical trial was the culmination of a year of research by Professor Williams and a special seminar devoted to these issues. Dennis Long, JD'98, who had defended Richard III in the school's last historical trial and had retired from the Army as a colonel before coming to law school, served as a consultant on military law. The research behind the event, which produced a record more than 400 pages long, will appear with a collection of essays as a book.

During the week, Justice Ginsburg participated in a number of events involving students. She met with student groups and classes, such as the Women's Law Caucus, the Community Legal Clinic, the Child Advocacy Clinic, and the Protective Order Project. In addition, she spoke to the entire first-year class and the graduate students about how the Supreme Court works, and to the second- and third-year students about women at the Supreme Court. Students were grateful for the opportunity to hear from a person many consider a living legend. As one awed first-year student stated, "I just began law school a few weeks ago, and I spent the afternoon sitting next to a Supreme Court Justice." —

THE CAST OF CHARACTERS — From left: Kathleen, Buck, Damon Leichty, David Williams, Justice Ginsberg, Frank Sullivan, Robert Long, Azin Lotfi, and Bryan Babb (editor of the Indiana Law Journal).

Host John Walda watches the proceedings.

GETTING THE DETAILS RIGHT — Dennis H. Long, JD'98, explains the military charges to the audience.

Kathleen Buck reviews her argument.

THE GENERALS — From left: David C. Williams, Ruth Bader Ginsberg, and Frank Sullivan Jr.

Bob Long argues for innocence, while co-counsel Azin Lotfi looks on in agreement.

John Walda, center, introduces the attorneys before the generals enter the courtroom.

IU President Myles Brand, far right, enjoys the action.

Photos by Nick Judy, IU Photographic Services

THE ATTORNEYS — Appearing for the Judge Advocate General, from left: Damon Leichty and Kathleen Buck.

Professor David Williams developed the historical and legal record.

THE OTHER ATTORNEYS — Appearing for George Armstrong Custer, from left: Robert A. Long and Azin Lotfi.

Damon Leichty is fitted for his uniform, circa 1876.

ORDER IN THE COURT MARTIAL — The proceedings get under way.

Indiana Justice Sullivan

U.S. Justice Ginsberg

At the last minute, Bryan Babb, left, goes over a point with host John Walda.

Justice Ginsberg, center, visits with a group of faculty, staff, and students at the Community Legal Clinic and Child Advocacy Clinic.

Bob Long listens to the JAG advocates' arguments.

Azin Lotfi expresses relief as the argument concludes.

A standing-room-only group of law students give Justice Ginsberg a standing ovation.

Law School inducts three into Academy of Law Alumni Fellows

Three distinguished alumni, Alecia DeCoudreaux, JD '78, Indiana Court of Appeals Judge Ezra Friedlander, JD'65, and Indiana Governor Frank O'Bannon, JD'57, were inducted into the Academy of Law Alumni Fellows on Oct. 2 in Bloomington. Established in 1985, the Academy recognizes Law School graduates who have earned distinction through their personal achievements and their dedication to the highest standards of their profession. Photographic portraits of the members hang in the classroom hall of the Law School, where they prompt current students to learn about their predecessors.

Alecia A. DeCoudreaux

Ezra H. Friedlander

Frank L. O'Bannon

Alecia A. DeCoudreaux

A native of Chicago, Ill., DeCoudreaux received her undergraduate degree from Wellesley College in 1976 and her law degree from Bloomington in 1978. After working with the San Francisco law firm of Pillsbury Madison & Sutro, DeCoudreaux joined Eli Lilly and Co., where she remains today as vice president of law.

Her 18 years with Lilly have taken DeCoudreaux from Indiana back to California and to Washington, D.C., before she returned to Indiana in 1994. She has held positions in Lilly's law division as an attorney with the corporate, pharmaceutical, and human resources areas. She has also served as general counsel of one of Lilly's former subsidiary companies. Outside the law division, DeCoudreaux has been the director of community relations, director of state government and community relations, director of government relations in Washington, D.C., executive director of medical research administration, and executive director of research planning and scientific administration.

Her current position was created in May 1997 as part of a realignment of the Lilly law division to link it more closely with the company's value chain and its future business direction. "Alecia's solid legal background and her experience with Lilly make her particularly well suited for this new direction," said Rebecca O. Goss, senior vice president and general counsel for Lilly. As vice president of law, DeCoudreaux is primarily responsible for providing direction and management for the patent, commercial, and technology acquisition and regulatory attorneys.

Her leadership extends far beyond Eli Lilly to the Indianapolis community, where she serves as director of Bank One, Indiana, Indianapolis Life Insurance Co., Indy Festivals Inc., and Indianapolis Downtown Inc. In March of this year, she was appointed to the five-member Board of Trustees at Citizens Gas & Coke Utility. In addition, DeCoudreaux is a member of the Board of Directors of Big Brothers of Greater Indianapolis.

In 1997, Girls Inc. of Indianapolis gave DeCoudreaux its Touchstone Award for "genuineness of commitment, determination, and achievement that inspires young women." The organization could not have found a recipient who better exemplified these characteristics. "I feel it is important for women to constantly reach out and mentor other women," DeCoudreaux says. "While women have made a lot of progress in society, we are still not at a point where there is true gender equality. We should be mindful of this and help other women when we have the chance."

True to her word, DeCoudreaux has been one of the driving forces behind the successful launching of the Women's Fund of Central Indiana, an organization that raises funds for programs to assist women and girls; she currently serves as a member of the group's advisory board. She has also been a member of the Steering Committee for the Women's Leadership Initiative, a member and chair of the Forum on Women and Philanthropy, and chair of the Women's Division of the United Way of Central Indiana. She is a member of the Program Committee for a groundbreaking conference for women attorneys in the state of Indiana taking place later this month. On Oct. 23, the Indiana State Bar is honoring DeCoudreaux with a Women in the Law Achievement Award for her contributions to the legal profession as a whole, as well as to women in the profession.

Indiana University has been the recipient of DeCoudreaux's commitment to education. In addition to serving as a member of the Indiana University President's Council, she is also a member of the Law School's Board of Visitors, as well as the Nucleus Committee of the Law School's capital campaign. In June, she was named to the IU Foundation Board of Directors. She has also served as a director of the Wellesley College Alumnae Association.

As one of DeCoudreaux's nominators noted "Time and again, Alecia has demonstrated leadership and excellence in her professional life and in public service. I can think of no one more deserving of joining the ranks of the Academy than Alecia DeCoudreaux."

Ezra H. Friedlander

Born in Newark, N.J., Judge Ezra Friedlander has called Indiana home since his undergraduate days at Indiana University, when he received a BA in history and government in 1962. Since graduating from this law school in 1965, the Honorable Ezra Friedlander has enjoyed a richly productive career.

Friedlander began his career as an associate in the Gary (now Merrillville), Ind., law firm of Lucas Holcomb & Medrea. He also served part time as a deputy prosecuting attorney for Lake County Juvenile Court in Gary. From 1970 to 1973, he served as corporate counsel in the office of the secretary of state and as a partner in the Indianapolis law firm of Dann Pecar Newman Talesnick & Kleiman. He has also been associated as a senior partner with Ancel Friedlander Miroff & Ancel, as well as Rubin & Levin. In 1992, then-Gov. Evan Bayh appointed Friedlander to the Indiana Court of Appeals.

Friedlander's creative thinking and commitment to the profession have been instrumental to the development of the legal profession. He has long been active in local, state, and American Bar Association activities, serving in countless volunteer capacities with these organizations. He is a board member and a founding fellow of the Indianapolis Bar Foundation. He is also a member of the Indiana Judges Association and the American Judges Association. In addition, Friedlander is a graduate of the Appellate Judges Institute of Judicial Administration from New York University and a graduate of the Appellate Judges Conference, State Judicial Institute.

As a nominator noted, "Judge Friedlander has provided leadership in all aspects of our society for many years." In addition to his devotion to the profession, Friedlander is also committed to his community. Not-for-profit organizations throughout the city of Indianapolis have benefitted from Friedlander's generosity. He has been associated with fund drives for the United Fund, the Heart Fund, the Cancer Fund, and the Indianapolis Art Museum, and he is a former member of the Board of Directors of the Indianapolis Blood Center Foundation.

Friedlander has served as a member of the Board of Directors of the Indianapolis Jewish Welfare Federation, and a former president of the Community Relations Council. He was chair of campaign divisions of the Jewish Welfare Federation drives. In 1976, he was the recipient of the Jewish Federation's L.L. Goodman Young Leadership Award. He has served as a board member of the State of Israel Bonds, the Beth-El Zedek Temple, and the Jewish Education Association.

A long-time supporter of his alma mater, Friedlander is a member of the IU Foundation Board of Directors, the Indiana University Varsity Club, and the Indianapolis Men's Club of Indiana University. He is a life member of the IU Alumni Association and past president of the Law Alumni Board. He is also a past member of the Indiana University Northwest Campus Advisory Committee and IU Northwest Board of Trustees. He is a member of the College of Arts and Sciences Dean's Advisory Council.

Friedlander has been characterized as having "self-deprecating wit and an easy demeanor." His counsel is sought in a variety of business, fund-raising, educational, community, and service issues. A member of the Academy of Law Alumni Fellows wrote in support of Judge Friedlander's nomination, "He is a credit to our community, and I would be proud to welcome him into the Academy."

Frank L. O'Bannon

When Frank O'Bannon was a boy, he heard his parents discussing current affairs over the dinner table every night: school board matters, politics, the family's

(continued on page 12)

In memoriam

School mourns two Alumni Fellows, outstanding alumnae

Two members of the Academy of Law Alumni Fellows died recently, both of them pioneering women attorneys whose careers and lives transformed the societies in which they lived and worked.

Judge Juanita Kidd Stout left legacy of excellence

First African-American woman to be elected a judge in this country dies at age 79

The Honorable Juanita Kidd Stout, JD'48, LLM'54, who died on Aug. 21 at age 79, lived a remarkable life of historic "firsts" marked by courage and compassion. A native of Oklahoma, Juanita Stout moved to Pennsylvania in 1954, after receiving two law degrees from IU, and opened a law practice. In 1959, after two years with the district attorney's office, Stout was appointed to the Philadelphia Municipal Court, with elections a scant two months away. Her victory in that election made her the first African-American woman in the country to win an election to a court of record. She later became the first African-American woman to be appointed to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court. She was named a member of the Academy of Law Alumni Fellows at the Law School in 1986.

Judge Stout's life touched thousands of Philadelphia residents, as recounted in the following article from The Philadelphia Inquirer.¹

"She had a great respect for the facts and treated every case on its own merit," said Mark Aronchick, chancellor of the Philadelphia Bar Association. "She was a role model for thousands of Philadelphia lawyers."

A small woman with silvery hair and soft features and a warm manner that belied her grit, she made history in 1959 when she ran for and won a seat on Philadelphia's Municipal Court. She had been a fixture in the city's judicial system ever since.

She tried dozens of cases, including the 1993 trial in absentia of Ira Einhorn, who was convicted of the 1977 murder of his girlfriend Holly Maddux.

"She had guts and courage," said Mayor Rendell, who knew Judge Stout since he served as district attorney in the 1970s.

"She had a real passion for law and justice," he said. "She would get outraged if there was an injustice in the courtroom, if someone had taken a life with no remorse, or if she thought the police had framed someone."

Juanita Kidd Stout

She was known for getting up at four in the morning to take advantage of the quiet hours for getting a start on the heavy workload she thrived on.

She was also known for her tough stand against gang violence, and she was determined to convince young people that they could do better. She was vigorous about cracking down on youthful offenders, a stand that in the early '60s gained her several death threats and promises to "get her" if she continued sending gang members to prison.

She spoke out on the exclusion of blacks from juries. She spoke out on deadbeat fathers, and in the 1960s she stood up against a group of men pushing for laws to make it more difficult for women to collect alimony and child support.

Judge Stout often spoke on the importance of education for preventing gang violence. "She was tough on gang violence and let them know you could have a better life without fighting," said Tyrone Stevens Drummond, a social worker for the South Philadelphia Community Center, who said Judge Stout had been a mentor to him since he was a teenager. "She wanted to let children know you need to learn to read and write and speak well and then you can get a job," he said. "She knew that first impressions count," especially when trying to fight stereotypes, he said, pointing out that she was always meticulous in her speech and dress.

She published articles condemning welfare policy in America and the controlled society in China.

Judge Stout was also a great wit, said Common Pleas Court Judge Lisa Richette, a long-time colleague who often conferred with her over difficult cases.

Judge Stout held a dogged devotion to law, which continued to the end of her life. In the last few months, she wrote an article for Philadelphia Lawyer on the lost virtue of courtesy.

Judge Stout was born in Wewoka, Okla., a farming and oil-drilling community near Shawnee. Her parents were both teachers. She earned a degree in music at the University of Iowa and taught music in Oklahoma.

In 1942, she married Charles O. Stout, also a teacher, who later became a professor at Maryland State College.

During World War II, she went to Washington to work for the government and after the war earned two law degrees at Indiana University.

Although she entered law when few African Americans and few women entered the profession, colleagues said she overcame racial and gender barriers by winning widespread respect.

"She set a standard in which everyone was oblivious of her race and gender," Richette said.

She came to Philadelphia to work as an administrative secretary to U.S. Circuit Court Judge William H. Hastie. She went into private practice before being appointed assistant district attorney on the recommendation of former District Attorney William Brady, who once said she was "the hardest-working lawyer in town."

Ten years after her historic election to the Municipal Court bench, Judge Stout was appointed to Philadelphia Common Pleas Court.

In 1988, she again made history, becoming the first African-American woman to be appointed to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court. Her tenure, however, was short. She served only about a year before she turned 70 and was forced to retire.

But she didn't retire from law, instead returning to Common Pleas Court, said the Rev. Shirley Pritchett, who for years worked for Judge Stout as a judicial secretary.

During her career, Judge Stout received dozens of awards and honors.

In 1963, she was appointed as a special ambassador to ("Juanita Kidd Stout" continues on page 12)

Harriet Bouslog Sawyer brought passion to fight for Hawaiian labor rights

Harriet Bouslog Sawyer, JD'36, a member of the Academy of Law Alumni Fellows since 1989, died on April 18, 1998. An article in the Honolulu Advertiser notes that Sawyer "was credited with helping convert Hawaii from a near-feudal society to one in which respect for civil liberties and workers' rights are paramount."

Sawyer left the law school in 1936 for, she thought, a life as a writer. Following her professor husband to Hawaii, she was dismayed by the racially stratified society and the poor working conditions she found in the territory.

She and her husband left for the mainland after Pearl Harbor, but not before Sawyer had obtained her Hawaii law license.

While working at the War Labor Board in Washington, she met Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's Workers Union, a labor union that had organized extensively in California and Hawaii. In 1946, the ILWU led its workers in the Hawaii sugar plantations out on strike, and several hundred of the workers were incarcerated under Hawaii's 1850 Unlawful Assembly and Riot Act, which was used to charge assembling workers with felonies.

When the ILWU could not find a Hawaii attorney to represent it, Sawyer, who had never tried a case before, was sent to the territory to represent these workers. Relying on then-novel constitutional arguments — including the argument that the grand juries that indicted the workers were constitutionally invalid because they included no women — Sawyer convinced the federal courts to stay the prosecutions in the cases, and they were all eventually dismissed.

Harriet Bouslog Sawyer

Sawyer stayed in Hawaii for the rest of her career as the ILWU's attorney. She was disbarred in 1952 for protesting the trial of most of the ILWU's leaders under the Smith Act, legislation that had been passed specifically to deport Harry Bridges and which made it a crime to belong to an organization that advocated the overthrow of the United States government. The Act was used extensively in the McCarthy period against suspected Communists.

The United States Supreme Court overturned her disbarment in 1959. Her accomplishments included playing a key role in the abolition of capital punishment in Hawaii. For her work, she was awarded the Allan F. Saunders Civil Liberties Award by the American Civil Liberties Union. She was also honored by the Hawaii Women Lawyers, the Hawaii State Legislature, and the Honolulu City Council for her achievements during her career.

In a resolution adopted in 1980, the Hawaii State Senate stated that "her service to working people serves as an example to the multitudes of young lawyers today that...unpopular causes are well worth the time and effort expended on them." — for international law, particularly for a international convention through the WHO on infectious disease prevention and control.

Alumni Weekend '98

(continued from page 1)

Professor Roger Dworkin continued with a presentation on emerging issues in the law of medical genetics. Dworkin, whose recent book, Limits, concerns many of these issues, stated that "the most important developments in American medicine are in the area of genetics, where new technologies permit the presymptomatic diagnosis of growing numbers of diseases and increasingly offer the prospect of genetic therapy. These developments pose serious questions concerning the rights of parents, concerning the possibility of insurance and employment discrimination against people with potential diseases, concerning the duties that professionals may owe to persons other than their patients, and concerning the propriety of manipulating human genes."

Professors Steve Johnson and Bill Popkin then turned the discussion from death to taxes. Popkin argued that recent tax legislation uses the Internal Revenue Code "to tinker with major policy issues on which there is insufficient agreement to obtain broad programmatic legislation, in areas such as education, medical care, and retirement." Popkin, who has recently published a new book on legislation, noted that these developments are due to endemic features of the political process that are likely to persist into the next century, and they produce effects that are directly contrary to what Congress says it wants — reduced tax complexity. Johnson then turned to the new tax burden of proof rules, arguing that they are largely symbolic, but are likely to have significant effects in decreasing public confidence in the tax code.

Juliet Smith, the Law School's electronic services librarian, ended the day with her popular demonstration of how the Internet has changed legal research. Working directly from the Internet, Smith demonstrated new resources for legal research on the Web and discussed new search strategies. —

Photos by Nick Judy,
IU Photographic Services

Schornhorst retires, receives Wallace and PILF awards

After 32 years at the Law School, Professor Tom Schornhorst retired at the end of spring semester, but not before he was honored for his outstanding teaching and his work in the public interest by the receipt of both the Leon Wallace Teaching Award and the Public Interest Law Foundation's Leonard Fromm Pro Bono Award.

The Leon Wallace Teaching Award stands for the very highest standards of excellence in teaching. Lauren Robel, who served as acting dean during spring semester, told the audience at the award ceremony, "Good teaching can proceed in many ways and mean many things. Wonderful teachers bring a variety of attributes to teaching, both personal attributes and ways of thinking about the law. But in a Law School, excellent teaching requires a respect for and passion about the responsibilities our students will assume when they leave our care. This year's recipient understands deeply that lawyers are asked to assume monumental — indeed, life-or-death — responsibilities, and the passion that he brings to the classroom reflects a deep understanding of what is at stake in your learning. That passion also reflects an abiding commitment to fostering the highest standards of professionalism and ethics in the students he teaches."

Robel continued, "In listening to our graduates discuss what they have taken away from this year's recipient's classes, I am always struck by the way in which they have internalized this teacher's standards for excellence in lawyering — and by how many of them still, after 30 years — consider Tom Schornhorst the measure of what it means to be an excellent lawyer."

The Public Interest Law Foundation established the Pro Bono Award two years ago to honor those who devoted significant time and energy to the public interest. In making the award, PILF recognized Professor Schornhorst's longstanding commitment to providing legal counsel to clients sentenced to death.

Bill of Particulars, the Law School's alumni magazine, will carry a full report on Schornhorst's retirement in its next issue.

Professor Tom Schornhorst, recipient of the Leon Wallace Teaching Award and the Public Interest Law Foundation's Leonard Fromm Pro Bono Award expresses his thanks as students applaud.

questions posed to the OLC involve disputes between government agencies. At the time of her departure, Johnsen was fifth on the organizational chart at the Department of Justice, directly behind the solicitor general. The OLC also provides legal advice to the attorney general, giving Johnsen the task of serving as Reno's advising attorney.

Johnsen had always hoped to teach. When her husband, John Hamilton, accepted a position as commissioner of the Indiana Department of Environmental Management, several prominent scholars contacted the Law School, noting the possibility that she might be lured to Indiana. Dean Fred Aman notes that the school is fortunate to have Johnsen on the faculty, "She is a person whose depth of experience and proven expertise and judgment in some of the most difficult and important areas of constitutional law will make her a resource for both our students and our faculty."

Some information in this article appeared in an article by Cary Solida in Indiana Lawyer, Sept. 16, 1998, and is used with permission.

Professor Applegate joins an environmental program that has grown steadily for the past decade. Thirty students are now seeking degrees jointly in both the Law School and the School of Public and Environmental Affairs. Applegate, who was a visiting professor during the spring, was drawn to the strength of the students, who, he notes, "are serious about their legal education," and found attractive the "unique opportunity to build a strong environmental program."

Another attraction was the seriousness of the scholarly community. Professor Applegate is currently finishing a casebook with several co-authors, titled "The Regulation of Toxic Substances," which will be published in 1999 by Foundation Press. "There is a synergy between what I do and what [Professor] Rob Fischman does. We concentrate on different areas but have a similar approach."

Rob Fischman agrees: "I am pleased, of course, because John raises our profile among the schools offering the most comprehensive programs in environmental law. But, more exciting to me is the stimulation of having a new generous, bright, and humorous colleague down the hall. Although John's scholarly interest in toxic pollution complements rather than overlaps my own research, his keen intellect enriches my work."

School welcomes Dawn Johnsen

Serving as acting assistant attorney general in the Office of Legal Counsel at U.S. Department of Justice, Dawn Johnsen was responsible for providing legal advice to the president and the executive branch. She brings that experience to the Law School as a new faculty member this fall, where she will be teaching courses in constitutional law and a seminar on separation of powers. A graduate of Yale Law School, Professor Johnsen served as a law clerk to the Honorable Richard Cudahy at the United States Court of Appeals for the 7th Circuit before going to the American Civil Liberties Union's Reproductive Freedom Project in New York. After a year with the ACLU, Johnsen took a position as the legal director of the National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League, where she established that organization's legal department and developed and supervised its legal and legislative strategies. Asked by Walter Dellinger to come to Washington as a deputy attorney general in the Office of Legal Counsel, Johnsen served in that capacity until appointed acting assistant attorney general, in charge of the office.

"The goal of the Office of Legal Counsel is to give the right answer to difficult legal questions," says Johnsen. "Our job is to say what the right thing is." Often, the

John Applegate joins law faculty

"Cincinnati is losing an exemplary citizen," begins the editorial in the Cincinnati Post lamenting Professor John Applegate's move to Bloomington to join the faculty at the IU School of Law. Indiana, however, is gaining an exemplary scholar and teacher with the arrival of John Applegate, the James B. Helmer Professor of Law at University of Cincinnati. Applegate, who joined the faculty this fall, is an environmental law expert whose scholarship has focused on theories of risk assessment. He will teach Toxics, International Environmental Law, and Property.

After completing law school at Harvard, Applegate clerked for the Honorable Edward S. Smith at the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. He then joined Covington & Burling in Washington, D.C., for four years, spending two years under Covington's auspices as a staff attorney with Neighborhood Legal Services Program in that city before joining the faculty at University of Cincinnati.

While in Cincinnati, Applegate was instrumental in the cleanup of the former Fernald uranium plant as a founding member and then chair of the Fernald Citizen's Advisory Board.

Manterfield retires from teaching

For 20 years, students have learned the principles of estate planning from Eric Manterfield. Manterfield, in turn, has logged 52,000 miles on his car in his commute from Indianapolis in his zeal to bring the principles of trusts and estates to his Bloomington students. After 31 seminars and almost 600 students, Manterfield ended his career as the school's longest-teaching adjunct professor this spring. Manterfield, a partner at Kreig Devault Alexander & Capehart, retired from the teaching both he and his students loved, to devote more time to his practice.

Rob Fischman awarded tenure

In May, 1998, the Board of Trustees of Indiana University approved the Law School's recommendation that Professor Robert Fischman be awarded tenure and promoted to the rank of full professor. Fischman joined the faculty in 1992, after a year at University of Wyoming College of Law, to develop the Law School's environmental law curriculum. Fischman had previously served as the director of the Natural Resources Program at the Environmental Law Institute in Washington, D.C.

Fischman received an AB from Princeton University, a JD from University of Michigan School of Law, and a master of science degree from University of Michigan's School of Natural Resources. Since he arrived at the Law School, he has been instrumental in redesigning the school's environmental law curriculum and in developing and nurturing the school's joint degree programs with the School of Public and Environmental Affairs.

In his scholarship, Fischman seeks to unify the divergent subspecialties of pollution control and resource management and employs insights from disparate fields to better understand the law. Fischman notes, "In the late 1960s and early 1970s, when modern environmental law emerged, the field was divided into two distinct branches: pollution control and resource management.

The thrust of most of my work has been to reweave these two divergent strands of environmental law."

Fischman views the work as "a crucial mission": "The physical world does not abide by our disciplinary boundaries. Achieving resource management goals, such as recovery of endangered wildlife, depends in part on the implementation of pollution control. For instance, environmental contamination contributes to low reproduction in many endangered species, such as the Florida panther. Likewise, achieving ambient environmental quality goals in pollution control law depends on effective management of natural resources. For instance, siltation largely caused by poor resource management is the leading cause of water quality impairment in the United States."

Fischman is the author of numerous articles, a textbook, Environmental Law — Environmental Decisionmaking: NEPA and the Endangered Species Act, and an anthology on environmental law topics. He has also presented his work at numerous conferences, such as that of the 10th annual National Association of Environmental Law Societies, and served as an instructor and speaker for the Environmental Protection Agency, the National Park Service, and the U.S. Forest Service.

Y2K: Law School Bulletin gets new look

The old red and white bulletin with the tiny print that introduced you to the programs and activities available at the Law School is a thing of the past. The 1998–2000 Law School Bulletin has a totally new look.

For several years, the Law School administration has been negotiating with the university to allow the Law School Bulletin to break out of its mandated form and use a new layout and style. Because of new university marketing efforts, the Law School was allowed to be the first academic unit to publish a bulletin that broke the old mold. Professors Fred Cate and Colleen Pauwels spent much of the spring and summer writing and editing the text. With the able editorial assistance of the new communications and marketing office of the vice president for public affairs and government relations, the bulletin was published in mid-August.

There is a fold-out cover with a montage of color pictures of the school and campus, as well as lots of large pictures throughout the piece. But the bulletin not only looks different; the organizational concept is also new. Organized programmatically, it incorporated the insights gained from discussions with students, faculty, and alumni groups and the lessons learned from the school's two smaller color brochures published a few years ago. The bulletin begins with program highlights and general information about the school and community. It then covers the curriculum, special programs, academic information, and student services and information. Financial information and admission criteria is next, followed by photos and biographies of faculty and administrators. A list of courses completes the text, with more color pictures at the back.

If you want to see the bulletin, here's how. There are two electronic versions on the Law School Web site at <http://www.law.indiana.edu>. There is an online version of the paper bulletin, using Adobe Acrobat, which looks just like the printed version. But if your computer can't handle Adobe Acrobat, a text version is also available on the Web site. Or if you would like to have a paper copy, call, e-mail, or write to us and we will send one out. We are proud of the new bulletin and the exciting things it says about the school, and we think you will be too.

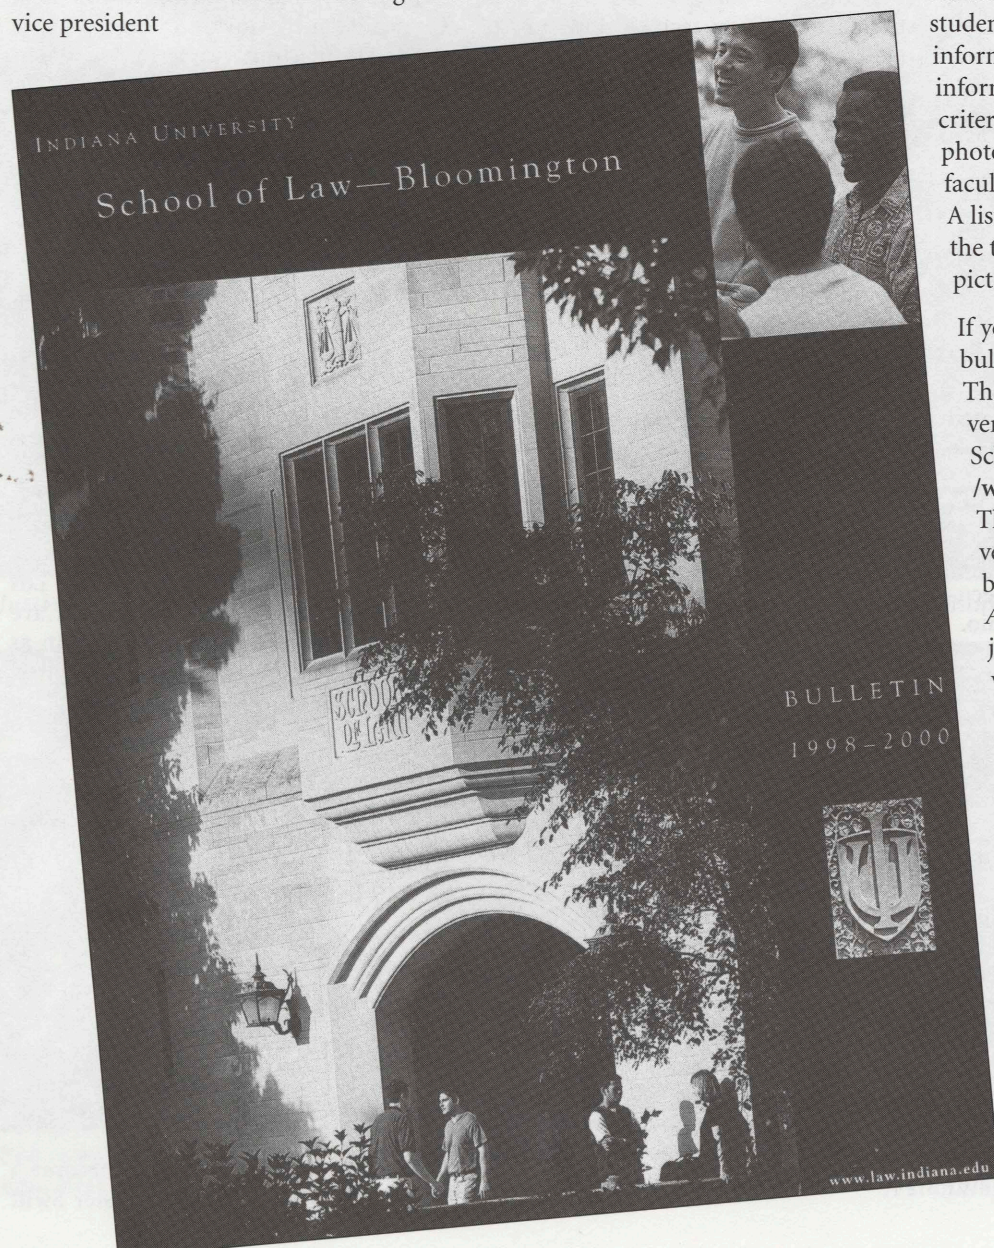

School's call for moot court judges brings in alumni

The Sherman Minton Moot Court Competition is under way, and 200 alumni have volunteered to return to the school as judges during the first semester of the competition. This year, 140 second-year students are participating in the two-semester competition. The students are arguing a case likely to be decided by the United States Supreme Court next year: whether peer-on-peer sexual harassment in schools is actionable under Title IX, and if so, whether there is an affirmative defense available to schools with sexual harassment procedures. Thirty-two students will emerge from this semester's rounds to enter the finals next semester.

Michael Puzio, the Moot Court Board Chief Justice, has been busy scheduling the alumni judges, and has made efforts to put classmates together on panels during the same evening. Many alumni who could not respond to the call for judges have volunteered to host students at their offices, serve as mentors, or work with the Career Services Office.

Puzio notes, "There is a remarkable diversity among the alumni who have volunteered. Paul G. Jasper, Class of 1932, and Peter Jurgeleit, Class of 1998, will serve on the same panel on Friday, Oct. 23. The Honorable E. Michael Hoff and Ann Delaney will be here on Monday, Oct. 19. Ned Robertson, Class of 1955, is a retired federal prosecutor and federal administrative law judge. He will present a Career Services seminar on Wednesday afternoon and judge that evening. In addition, former Indiana Supreme Court Justice Fred E. Rakestraw, Class of 1949 (Professor Val Nolan's classmate), will be here on Wednesday, Oct. 21."

Lauren Robel, associate dean, was overwhelmed with the response to the letter that went out to alumni in September. "I have enjoyed reading the reminiscences about law school in many of the letters responding to my request for judges. The alumni response has been absolutely wonderful, and quite heartwarming. And the students are thrilled at the opportunity to argue before such a diverse and interesting group of people." —

Before 1960

Isaac D. Gregg, JD'37, writes to say he is now 89 years young! He has retired and lives in Thorntown, Ind.

H Hanly Hammel Jr., LLB'47, JD'67, active in several masonic organizations, was named a Sagamore of the Wabash. He has been practicing law for more than 50 years. He lives in West Lafayette. He served in World War II in South Pacific with the 13th Air Force.

Willard Zeller Carr Jr., BS'50, JD'67, has served on the California World Trade Commission since 1992. He has been a partner with the firm of Gibson Dunn & Crutcher for more than 40 years.

Robert Henry Stahlschmidt, BS'50, LLB'55, JD'67, is retired. He has lived in Sarasota since June 1958, where he practiced law for two years and then was elected county prosecuting attorney, holding that position for 12 years. He was later elected and served for 12 years as county judge. His wife, Barbara, taught elementary school in Sarasota for about eight years, received her master's in elementary education/administration from the University of Southern Florida and was principal of Gulf Gate Elementary School for 23 years. She retired in June 1990. They have one son, Robert II, who is married and has two children.

Charles E. Fritz, LLB'53, JD'67, is president of Growers Automobile Insurance Association. He was formerly secretary of the Indianapolis Farmers Market. He lives in Indianapolis.

Richard P. Good Jr., BS'54, JD'59, was appointed judge of the Marion Superior Court by Gov. Frank O'Bannon.

Thomas A. Dailey, BS'55, MBA'56, LLB'62, celebrated his 41st anniversary with his wife, Bonnie, BA'55, MAT'62, this year. Son Mike received his LLB from the University of Denver. Son Bob is a junior in law school at the University of San Francisco and works full time for Thomas at D & M Development Co., a real estate development company. Thomas and Bonnie live in Suisun, Calif.

Shirley S. Abrahamson, JD'56, LLD'86, a justice on the Wisconsin Supreme Court, is the author of All the World's a Courtroom: Judging in the New Millennium. She was awarded the Rosewood Gavel for outstanding judicial service and was elected a member of the American Philosophical Society. She was also awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree from Marian College in Fond du Lac, Wis. She lives in Madison, Wis.

1960-69

Lloyd H. Milliken, BS'57, JD'60, was elected president of the Defense Research Institute, the nation's largest association of civil defense lawyers. He is a senior partner in the Indianapolis law firm of Locke Reynolds Boyd & Weisell.

Joseph T. Bumbleburg, JD'61, was recently reappointed to state Board of Trustees of Ivy Tech State College by Governor O'Bannon. He is serving as vice chair of the board and lives in Lafayette, Ind.

Vernon Jean Owens, LLB'62, JD'67, retired as deputy chief counsel for the Internal Revenue Service in 1987.

Theodore Charles Ziemer, BS'62, received an honorary doctor of laws degree from the University of Southern Indiana in recognition of his civic leadership, which includes long-time service on the USI Foundation Board of Directors. He lives in Evansville.

Terry G. Fewell, JD'65, has joined the Indianapolis law firm of Scopelitis Garvin Light & Hanson. He is former vice president general counsel of Allied Van Lines Inc. and a founder and former president and board chair of the Chicago chapter of the American Corporate Counsel Association. He lives in Barrington, Ill.

Robert D. Arnold, BS'54, JD'67, authored two recent books about IU. For the 40th anniversary of the Class of '54, he wrote a chronology of September 1950 to June 1954 and also authored Hoosier Autumn: The Remarkable Story of Indiana University's 1945 Football Championship Team.

John D. Franklin, JD'67, settled a $183,000,000 class action price-fixing lawsuit against two cellular service providers on behalf of cellular telephone subscribers in the Los Angeles market.

Stephen Wayne Cook, BS'66, JD'68, and Stephen Matthew Cook, BS'91, JD'94, formed the father-son firm of Cook & Cook in January. They live in Noblesville.

Mary Catherine Barton, JD'68, was a candidate in the Democratic Primary for Marion County prosecuting attorney. She lives in Indianapolis.

David C. Evans, BS'68, JD'71, has been elected trustee of the National Building Museum. He lives in Bethesda, Md.

Thomas K. Maxwell, JD'68, has been president of F & M Bankshares since 1978. He has also been active in the community, serving on the local school board for the last 23 years, 19 of them as president. He and his wife, Cheryl, have two sons: Tom Jr., who graduated from Wisconsin in 1997, and Ed, who will be a freshman at Lawrence University in Appleton, Wis.

Anita L. Morse, JD'68, has finished her PhD in information and library studies at the University of Michigan. She is taking a couple of years to do volunteer work and take classes at Earlham School of Religion. Her interest is in the place of moral ethics in our current understanding of professional responsibility. She lives in Richmond, Ind.

Douglas C. Leatherbury, BA'64, JD'68, received the democratic nomination for clerk of the Indiana Supreme Court, Court of Appeals and Tax court.

Virgil W. Hunt, BA'66, JD'69, is the CEO and president of Arvin Industries Inc. of Columbus, Ind.

Derald D. Kruse, BA'66, JD'69, was appointed to the Board of Directors at Grabill Bank in Grabill, Ind.

Stephen P. Malak, JD'69, has been promoted to vice president and general counsel of Production Products Corp. He lives in Manlius, N.Y.

1970-79

Steven G. Cracraft, JD'73, was named partner in the Indianapolis firm of McHale Cook & Welch L.L.P.

Alice M. Craft, MLS'70, JD'73, has moved to Hilliard, Ohio, and is now an administrative law judge for the Office of Hearings and Appeals of the Social Security Administration in Columbus, Ohio.

Ronald S. Reinstein, BA'70, JD'73, is an associate presiding criminal judge of the Superior Court of Arizona and was appointed to the National Commission on the Future of DNA Evidence and the Justice Department Center for Sex Offender Management.

Richard Scott Ryder, JD'74, has co-authored a college-level textbook, published by Aspen Press. It is a comprehensive and practical look at juvenile delinquency and juvenile justice issues and was three years in the writing, including research at the IU Bloomington Law Library. Ryder lives in Kalamazoo, Mich.

Judith A. Schevtchuk, BA'72, JD'74, has permanently returned to Honolulu with her Navy-lawyer husband and two daughters. She has re-established her solo family law practice.

Adrian J. Good, JD'75, retired in 1991 and is working on Habitat for Humanity, Scorre, and Kiwanis. He enjoys hiking, whitewater rafting, and growing rhododendrons. Before retiring, he was a patent and trademark attorney in private practice, as well as patent counsel for Great Lakes Carbon Corp. for a number of years. He was also patent counsel for New Jersey Zinc, St. Joe Zinc, Chem-Links Inc., and Horsehead Industries.

Larry A. Mackey, JD'76, has joined the law firm of Barnes & Thornburg in Indianapolis. He previously served as assistant U.S. attorney, Southern District of Indiana, from 1986 to 1998. He also served as lead prosecutor in the Terry Nichols case in Denver from 1997 to 1998, and previously as chief of staff in the Timothy McVeigh case, also in Denver, from 1995 to 1997. He lives in Carmel, Ind.

Stephen R. Pennell, BA'73, JD'76, was appointed Indiana State representative of the Defense Research Institute, the nation's largest association of civil defense lawyers. He is a partner with the law firm Stuart & Branigin in Lafayette.

Frona M. Powell, BA'70, JD'76, is a contributing editor of Real Estate Law Journal. She is author of Law and the Environment and is an associate professor of business law, teaching real estate law and environmental law at IU School of Business.

Chris D. Molen, BS'74, JD'77, is a partner in the Atlanta Office of Paul Hastings Janofsky Walker L.L.P.

Debra K. Luke, BA'75, JD'78, was promoted to senior vice president and trust officer at Bank Calumet National Association. She is the first woman senior vice president in the 65-year history of Bank Calumet. Her responsibilities include administering trusts and estates and new business development. She lives in Crown Point.

Alice J. Becker, JD'77, is a senior associate general counsel for Peace Health, a health-care system with facilities in Alaska, Washington, and Oregon. She lives in Seattle.

Robert N. Berg, JD'77, works at Vincent Berg Stalzer & Menendez P.C., Atlanta. He lives in Roswell, Ga.

Glenn Scolnik, BS'74, JD'78, was elected president of Hammond Kennedy Whitney & Co. Inc., New York, a private capital firm specializing in management buy-outs of middle market manufacturing companies.

Madalyn S. Kinsey, BS'76, JD'79, joined Kroger Gardis & Regas as partner representing financial institutions and parties in commercial and real estate transactions. She lives in Indianapolis.

Kenneth E. Lauter, BS'79, JD'82, is a founding partner of the Indianapolis law firm Haskin Lauter Cohen & LaRue. He lives in Mooresville.

Jacqueline A. Simmons, JD'79, was elected vice president of Reilly Industries Inc., Indianapolis.

1980-89

Rebecca Clendenen, BS'81, JD'84, is managing attorney of the Bloomington office of Bingham Summers Welsh & Spilman.

Corinne R. Finnerty, BA'78, JD'81, was elected to First Financial Bancorp's Board of Directors. She is a partner in the North Vernon law firm of McConnell and Finnerty and is the city attorney for North Vernon.

Edward W. Gerecke, JD'81, was appointed vice committee chair of the litigation committee of the Defense Research Institute. He is a partner in the Tampa, Fla. office of Carlton Fields Ward Emmanuel Smith & Cutler.

Sandra Heeke, BS'78, JD'81, is a partner in Smith Bartlett Heeke Carpenter Lewis & Thompson. She is married to Rick Bartlett, BS'78, JD'81. They live in New Albany and are also members in a real estate closing and title insurance business called Hoosier Title & Closing Co. LLC.

Phil Isenbarger, BS'81, JD'84, a partner with the law firm of Bingham Summers Welsh & Spilman, was elected president of the Indianapolis Bar Association. He lives in Zionsville.

Steven L. Zeller, JD'81, is managing director of Newage International, Stanford, England.

Robert T. Grand, JD'82, is the new managing partner for the Indianapolis office of Barnes & Thornburg.

Alan A. Levin, JD'82, is the new managing partner for the firm of Barnes & Thornburg in Indianapolis.

Elizabeth L. Majers, JD'82, joined the firm of McDermott Will & Emery. She joined the firm's corporate department, where she will continue her practice focusing on the representation of insurance companies, domestic and foreign banks and other institutions in a wide variety of privately placed financial transactions. She lives in Winnetka, Ill.

Christopher S. Roberge, BA'79, JD'82, started Roberge Galbraith & Collingnon in Indianapolis.

Michael S. Vass, JD'82, has two children, Kaitlin and Michael, and lives in Crown Point.

Jason W. Levin, BS'80, JD'83, is a partner with the firm of Rudnick & Wolfe in Chicago.

Timothy J. Riffle, BA'80, JD'83, is practicing tax law at Barnes & Thornburg in Indianapolis.

Anne A. Bennett, BS'83, JD'91, is a Republican candidate for Cook County circuit court judge in the November general election. She is employed in Ernst & Young L.L.P.'s financial advisory services/dispute resolution and litigation services practice, working as a litigation and trial consultant on commercial litigation, damage analysis, and fraud investigations. In addition, she serves on the Illinois CPA Society's regulation and legislation committee and the economic development/redevelopment commission in Village of La Grange, Ill.

Scott R. Leisz, BS'83, JD'86, has been elected to the Board of Directors of McHale Cooke & Welch P.C. He lives in Greenwood.

Camie Swanson-Hull, JD'83, was appointed to the Indiana Utility Regulatory Commission by Governor Evan Bayh in June 1996 for a four-year term. She is married to Andrew W. Hull, JD'86. They live in Noblesville.

Thomas W. Waldrep, JD'83, is chair of the Continuing Legal Education Committee of the North Carolina Bar Association.

Mark W. Weller, BA'80, JD'83, is a partner at Baker & Daniels in Indianapolis.

Greta E. (Gerberding) Cowart, BS'82, JD'85, was elected partner in the Texas-based law firm of Haynes and Boone L.L.P.

David Patrick Hall, BS'85, JD'93, opened a solo practice in Springfield, Ill. He is specializing in estate planning, business law, and health-care law. He was married to Stephanie Dickson in January.

Augustavia J. Haydel, JD'85, has joined Los Angeles Care Health Plan as general counsel and executive director of legal services. She lives in L.A.

Timothy D. Hernly, BS'82, MBA'85, JD'85, a partner with the law firm of Barnes & Thornburg in Indianapolis, was elected chair of the Taxation Section of the Indiana State Bar Association.

John P. Judge, JD'85, MS'86, is a partner with the Philadelphia firm of Montgomery McCracken Walker & Rhoads L.L.P.

Deanna Swisher, JD'85, has become a Shareholder of the firm of Foster Swift

Augustavia Haydel

Visit these Web sites of interest to IU alumni:

- IU School of Law
law.indiana.edu
- IU Alumni Association
indiana.edu/~alumni
- IU AlumNet
alumnet.indiana.edu
- International Alumni
indiana.edu/~alumni/intfrm/if.cgi

Collins & Smith P.C. She practices primarily in the area of commercial litigation and is a member of the firm's litigation department. She lives in Okemos, Mich.

Edith Lynn Grayson, JD'86, was appointed to the Illinois Bar Journal's Editorial Advisory Board. She lives in Long Grove, Ill.

Scott R. Leisz, JD'86, was elected to the Board of Directors of the Indianapolis firm of McHale Cook & Welch.

Susie Ross Poole, JD'86, who works for the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals, sometimes misses the excitement of the trial court. She is in her 12th year as senior law clerk and still finds it challenging. She lives in Little Rock, Ark.

Christopher J. Randall, BA'76, MBA'86, JD'86, is in his second year in Argentina and will be acting consul general at the U.S. Embassy. He has just returned from a four-week assignment along the U.S.-Mexico border, dealing with immigration issues. He'll be in Argentina until July 1999 and is just starting to investigate the possibilities for next assignments.

Susan E. (Eads) Role, JD'86, was promoted to the position of legislative director for U.S. Representative Julia Carson, 10th District of Indiana.

David T. Schaefer, BA'83, JD'86, is a partner in Woodward Hobson & Fulton L.L.P., specializing primarily in automotive and drug product liability and premises liability litigation. He lives in Louisville.

Thomas R. Newby, BA'72, JD'87, is a law clerk for Judge Melissa Mattingly, Indiana Court of Appeals. He lives in Indianapolis.

Douglas R. Adelsperger, BS'85, JD'88, was awarded the designation of business bankruptcy specialist by the CLLA Academy of Commercial and Bankruptcy Law Specialists.

Sharon L. Bohnenkemper, BA'84, JD'88, is an associate with the Jasper law firm of McHale Cook Welch & Chappell and has been elected president of the Dubois County Estate Planning Council.

Rebekah Pierson-Treacy, JD'88, has been a master commissioner for more than three years. She now sits on the bench in Superior Court 13. She has been married to Ed Treacy for more than five years and recently enjoyed a safari in Kenya. She was also appointed to the Protection and Advocacy Commission by Governor O'Bannon and serves on the board of Flanner House, a local community center. She lives in Indianapolis.

Marine Maj. Jon F. Reynolds, JD'88, received the Navy and Marine Corps Achievement Medal for his outstanding service as officer in charge with Combat Service Support Detachment 131, 1st Force Service Support Group.

John C. Barce, BS'86, JD'89, was promoted to partner in the law firm of Barnes & Thornburg in Fort Wayne.

Brian S. Fennerty, BS'84, JD'89, is now a partner at Baker & Daniels in Indianapolis.

Paul Weiss, BS'89, JD'93, recently represented plaintiffs on a toxic tort class action in Chicago in which the Illinois courts recognized the plaintiff's claim for "medical monitoring" for the first time. He lives in Seattle.

Mark E. Wright, BA'83, JD'89, is now a partner at Baker & Daniels in Indianapolis.

1990-present

William M. Braman, JD'90, was named partner in the Indianapolis firm of McHale Cook & Welch L.L.P.

Tracy Ann Pappas, BA'87, JD'90, has two children, ages 2 and 4, and works at Legal Services Organization of Indianapolis.

Anne A. Bennett, BS'83, JD'91, is a republican candidate for Cook County, Ill., Circuit Court judge in the November general elections.

Stephen Matthew Cook, BS'91, JD'94, and Stephen Wayne Cook, BS'66, JD'68, formed the father-son firm of Cook & Cook in January. They live in Noblesville.

Jeffrey D. Echt, BS'88, JD'91, is vice president of finance at Trizac Hahn Office Properties Inc., Chicago.

Thomas Jensen

Thomas A. Jensen, JD'91, has recently joined Baker & Daniels, where he practices international law. He lives in Indianapolis.

Mark W. Pfeiffer, BS'91, JD'95, is an attorney with the law firm of Harrison & Moberly in Indianapolis.

Bruce Alan Brightwell, BA'89, JD'92, received the Louisville Bar Association's Pro Bono Award for his work in coordinating the Flood Relief Project.

Jason P. Cooper, JD'92, is a partner in Alston & Bird's Patient Solicitation Group in the Charlotte, N.C., office of Bell Seltzer/Alston & Bird.

John R. Fernandez, BS'85, MPA'89, JD'92, mayor of Bloomington, has been honored as one of 16 people chosen to serve as members of the Local Government Advisory Committee.

Phillip F. Fox, JD'92, is in his sixth year at Kinney & Lange in Minneapolis.

Charles M. Gering, JD'92, was named a partner in the litigation department of McDermott Will & Emery's Chicago office. He lives in Wheaton, Ill.

William Hallock, JD'92, will serve as the Central and East European Law Initiative's first liaison in Banja Luka, Bosnia-Herzegovina. Currently on leave from the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Baltimore, he will work to promote the independence of the judiciary and legislative reform and the development of independent lawyers' organizations.

Steven D. Hardin, BS'89, JD'92, is an attorney at the Indianapolis law firm of McHale Cook & Welch and was elected secretary/treasurer of the Indiana State Bar Association's Young Lawyers Section.

Moirra J. Squier, BA'86, JD'92, a general counsel at MedPlus Inc., was selected as a member of the 1998 class of the Cincinnati Academy of Leadership for Lawyers. Squier lives in Cincinnati.

Jim Oliver, BA'89, JD'92, won nomination as the Democratic nominee for Brown County prosecutor in May 1998 and will run for office in the general election in November 1998. He and his wife, Amy, JD'92, live in a log cabin in Brown County and commute to Indianapolis.

Caroline S. Earle, JD'93, is a fifth year associate at Wilson & White P.C. She specializes in civil litigation, employment law, personal injury, family law, and workers compensation. She married Christopher Rice in the summer. She lives in Barre, Vt.

Phillip D. Hatfield, JD'93, has a new daughter, Ayn Mu-ning Hatfield, born on Nov. 10, 1997, in Vancouver, British Columbia. They live in Hood River, Ore.

Anne M. Kindling, JD'93, is an associate with the law firm of Goodell Stratton Edmonds & Palmer L.L.P. She lives in Topeka, Kan.

Susan C. Lynch, JD'93, was married to Francis Swift last summer in Washington. She is working on her LLM in litigation and the judicial process at Georgetown Law School. She has a German shepherd, Justie, who is named after Lady Justice, and they work with Mid-Atlantic Search and Rescue.

Jerry L. Maynard II, BA'89, JD'93, was appointed assistant general counsel for Meharry Medical College. He lives in Antioch, Tenn.

Jeffrey A. Michael, JD'93, is a founding member of Beck Michael & Beck. He lives in Indianapolis.

Patrick W. Rasche, JD'93, has joined Armstrong Teasdale Schlafly & Davis, St. Louis, practicing patent and intellectual property law.

Stanley Crosley, JD'94, has joined Eli Lilly as associate counsel for information technology. He lives in Indianapolis.

Yasmine Rassam, JD'94, just finished a two-year teaching fellowship at Columbia University Law School and received her LLM from Columbia University. She wrote an article scheduled to appear in the Virginia Journal of International Law. She lives in New York and will start at O'Melveny & Myers as an associate this fall.

Eric J. Vermeulen, BA'89, JD'94, is the director of the Morgan County, Ind., Office of Family and Children.

Carla Denine Boddy, JD'95, was promoted to assistant vice president/attorney in the law department of National City Bank in Cleveland. She lives in Shaker Heights, Ohio.

Drew Limon

Raymond Limon, JD'95, a staff attorney with U.S. Office of Personal Management, practices employment and civil rights litigation. He and his wife, Susana, MPA'94, are the proud parents of Drew Anthony Limon, born on Nov. 13, 1997.

Eric N. Ward, JD'95, joined Hughes Hubbard & Reed L.L.P. as an associate in the corporate group. Prior to that, he was a legal officer at the International Court of Justice in The Hague during 1996-97. He lives in New York.

Cecil J. Autry, MPA'96, JD'96, worked on the campaign that successfully introduced and enacted a standard enforcement seat belt law in Indiana.

Heather Lee Banner, JD'96, was married to Mitch Kane in July. She is working at Lowe Gray Steele & Darko L.L.P. in Indianapolis and lives in Noblesville.

Cajardo R. Lindsey, JD'96, is now pursuing a career in acting. He recites poetry around Denver and has his own cassette, titled Make it Plain — Poetry for the Soul. He lives in Aurora, Colo.

James E. Crawford, JD'97, has joined the firm of Pfaff Brotherson & Killoren and will concentrate on civil practice. He lives in Elkhart.

Troy D. Farmer, JD'97, joined Baker & Daniels as an associate. He is a member of the individual/family services, estate, and probate team and practices in the areas of estate planning and administration and family services law.

Charlene R. Fisher, JD'97, served as public interest law institute fellow at Northwestern University Legal Clinic in summer 1997. She is now married to James M. Foss, JD'96, who is employed at Winston & Strawn in Chicago.

Mark D. Fridy, JD'97, is an associate attorney at Stites & Harbison in Louisville. His wife, Shelly S. Gibson, JD'97, is an attorney at Airhart & Associates, Louisville.

Dominic W. Glover, JD'97, joined the law firm of Joyce Thayer Sword in Columbus, Ind., and is also at IUPUI Columbus.

Jong R. Kim, LLM'97, is a faculty member at the Soonchunhyang University Business School in Korea.

Todd J. Maurer, JD'97, is an associate of Rubin & Levin. He lives in Carmel.

Angela K. Moorman, MS'97, JD'97, is an associate with the law firm of Lloyd Gosselink Blevins Rochelle Baldwin & Townsend, Austin, Texas.

Kevin R. Robling, BS'84, JD'97, is an associate in the Phoenix firm of Gallagher & Kennedy.

Jonathan J. Sievers, JD'97, is an associate with the law firm of Warner Norcross & Judd L.L.P., Grand Rapids, Mich.

We want to hear from you!

Please use the enclosed form to send us your class note. While you're at it, become a member of your law alumni association today!

In memoriam

Thomas Burton Dumas, BS'41, LLB'42, JD'67, died on July 31, 1998.

William K. Bennett, JD'48.

Garold E. Bramblett, LLB'57, JD'67, died on April 10, 1998, in Winston Salem, N.C., in a glider accident. He worked in several private practices, and from 1980 to 1997 was a partner in the law firm of Parmelee Bollinger & Bramblett. At the time of his death, he was a partner in Ware Fressola Van Der Sluys & Adolphson in Monroe, Conn. Bramblett was admitted to the bar in Connecticut, New York, and Indiana and was a member of the American and Connecticut Bar associations, having held several posts in the latter. He also served as an arbitrator for the American Arbitration Association.

William B. Ream, BS'57, LLB'66, JD'67, died on May 22, 1998, at Bloomington Hospital. A lawyer and civil engineer, he was an accountant for State Board of Indiana and Standard Oil Co. He was a member of the Monroe County Bar Association and election board and served 10 years on the Monroe County Liquor Board. He was a veteran of the Korean War.

Arden Zobroski, JD'49, died on May 16, 1998.

IU Law Alumni Update

Volume 8, Number 2

This newsletter is published for the IUB School of Law Alumni Association in cooperation with the Indiana University Alumni Association to encourage alumni interest in and support for the school. For membership or activities information, call (800) 824-3044 or e-mail iualumni@indiana.edu.

School of Law

Dean Alfred C. Aman Jr.
Associate Dean/Editor Lauren Robel
Editor Colleen Pauwels

IU Alumni Association

University Director
for Alumni Affairs Jerry F. Tardy
Associate Alumni Director John Hobson
Editor for Constituent
Publications Carol Edge
Editorial Assistant Deborah Chung

All correspondence and requests for permission to reprint should be sent to Office of Development and Alumni Relations, Indiana University School of Law-Bloomington, 211 South Indiana Avenue, Bloomington, Indiana 47405. Phone: (812) 855-9781. Fax: (812) 855-0555. E-mail: laurenrob@law.indiana.edu.

New Alumni Fellows

(continued from page 4)

newspaper business, and other community affairs. He grew up in an atmosphere of community service. Years later, these conversations would prove to be the foundation upon which Gov. Frank O’Bannon built his own life and career.

As a teen-ager, O’Bannon set type by hand at the Corydon Democrat, a newspaper his grandfather Lewis purchased in 1907. The younger O’Bannon eventually won a Boy Scout merit badge for printing. He also did every other job around the place — sweeping and cleaning, helping feed newsprint into the press, and folding papers when the new issue came out every Wednesday. “I just loved it,” says O’Bannon, recounting his newspaper days.

In 1952, O’Bannon received a bachelor’s degree in government from Indiana University. Following his graduation, he served in the U.S. Air Force for two years before returning to the IU School of Law to earn a law degree in 1957. O’Bannon then returned to Corydon, where he practiced law at the firm that later became O’Bannon Funk & Simpson. During this time, he also went back to work at the newspaper, laying out pages, taking photographs, writing a sports column and occasional editorials. O’Bannon also served as a deputy prosecuting attorney, a town attorney for Corydon, Palmyra, Elizabeth, and Lanesville, and managed the First Federal Savings & Loan for several years. O’Bannon continues as the chair of the board of O’Bannon Publishing Co. His newspaper has won awards as the state’s outstanding weekly; despite its name, the Corydon Democrat takes pride in reporting the news without partisanship.

Frank O’Bannon’s grandfather, Lewis, was a self-taught lawyer who became a county official and ran unsuccessfully for lieutenant governor in 1924. Frank O’Bannon’s father was elected to the Indiana Senate in 1950, serving from 1951 to 1970 — the year Frank O’Bannon was elected to his father’s old seat. O’Bannon intended to serve just two terms, but his party continually asked him to run for subsequent terms. At the time, he had no intention of running for lieutenant governor or governor.

For 18 years, O’Bannon served as a part-time legislator in the Indiana Senate. He represented eight counties in southern Indiana, west of New Albany and east of Evansville. From 1979 until his election as lieutenant governor, his colleagues chose him to serve as the Senate Democratic floor leader. As one Academy of Law Alumni nominator wrote, “Frank O’Bannon is steadfast in his beliefs and serves as a role model for all of us.”

O’Bannon’s passion and commitment to public service has distinguished his career. Running with Evan Bayh in 1988, he was elected the state’s 47th lieutenant governor. He was re-elected in 1992 by the largest margin in modern Indiana history. In 1996, O’Bannon was elected Indiana’s 47th governor and was inaugurated on Jan. 13, 1997.

As lieutenant governor, O’Bannon served as the director of the Indiana Department of Commerce and nudged Indiana into a leadership position in economic development, business expansion, and job creation. He also chaired the Indiana Housing Finance Authority, which helped more than 13,500 families to purchase homes, and the Indiana Commission for Agriculture and Rural Development, which spearheaded the first-ever long-range strategic plan for developing and preserving farms, businesses, and communities in rural Indiana.

As governor of Indiana, O’Bannon has promoted programs to make Indiana a safer and better place to live. In his first year, he led a successful effort to cut income and inheritance taxes on middle- and lower-income Hoosiers by $100 million and to cut property taxes by $148 million. He persuaded the legislature to fund 500 more police officers at every level of government statewide. Gov. O’Bannon also launched the Safe Haven Program, allocating funds to keep school buildings open before and after class to provide safety and supervision in an effort to guide students away from violent behavior, alcohol, and other drugs. This year, O’Bannon is serving as the vice chair of the Democratic Governors’ Association.

In a 1997 Indianapolis Star article, O’Bannon described himself as a man whose beliefs have changed little through nearly three decades in state politics. The same article described the O’Bannon style as “a dash of homespun charm. Plenty of political loyalty. And always that personal touch.”

In memoriam

Juanita Kidd Stout

(continued from page 5)

the Kenyan independence celebration, and, in 1967, she toured six African countries in a cultural and educational exchange program for the State Department.

In 1965, she was named Outstanding Woman Lawyer of the Year by the National Association of Women Lawyers.

In 1981, she was inducted into the Oklahoma Hall of Fame.

In 1988, she was appointed Justice of the Year by National Association of Women Judges. That same year, Gov. Robert P. Casey named her a Distinguished Daughter of Pennsylvania.

In 1994, the Philadelphia Bar Association honored her with the Sandra Day O’Connor Award, given to the most outstanding woman in her profession. And, in 1997, she received the Philadelphia Board of Education’s John F. Kennedy Humanitarian Award.

¹ “Juanita Kidd Stout dies at age 79; first black woman to be elected judge,” by Faye Flam, from The Philadelphia Inquirer, Aug. 22, 1998. Reprinted with permission.

Nonprofit Organization
U.S. Postage Paid
Permit No. 2
Bloomington, Indiana

INDIANA UNIVERSITY
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
Indiana University School of Law—Bloomington
IU Alumni Association
211 South Indiana Avenue
Bloomington, IN 47405

Address Service Requested

Printed in U.S.A. on recycled paper

HELP US STAY IN TOUCH...

We are collecting fax numbers and e-mail addresses from our alumni, as well as updating our records. Please take a few moments to fill out this form and mail it back to us, along with any current news about yourself. Photos and clippings are always welcome. Material we receive will be published in an “Alumni News” column.

Name _____

Preferred name _____

Last name while at IU _____ IU degree(s)/Yr(s) _____

Soc. Sec. # or Student ID # _____

Home address _____ Phone _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Law firm/business name _____

Law firm/business address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Phone _____ Fax _____

E-mail _____ URL _____

New address? ☐ Yes ☐ No Mailing address preference: ☐ Home ☐ Business

Spouse name _____ Last name while at IU _____

IU Degree(s)/Yr(s) _____

News & Comments: _____

Source: IU Law Alumni Update, Fall 1998

Mail this form, along with any attachments, to Development and Alumni Relations Office, Indiana University School of Law, 211 South Indiana Avenue, Room 200, Bloomington, IN 47405; or visit our Web site at www.law.indiana.edu; or fax to (812) 855-0555.